Key benefits

- Up to £1000 per company could be available for senior management training.
  - £500 of training support for the owner/senior manager/key director.
  - If you match this sum by contributing to more training, up to a further £500 could be available to develop leadership and management skills. Your company could have £1500 of training for just a £500 contribution.
- The training can be in any subject area that will help a director or senior manager develop in their role, including:
  - Short courses; one to one coaching; guided learning; formal qualifications or contributing units.

Eligibility criteria

- The funding offer excludes mandatory and technical training.
- The initial £500 offer is limited to one person per organisation.
- The organisation must have between five and 249 employees.

How it works

Our adviser will help you examine the key areas and targets for the manager or director concerned, and establish where increased skills or knowledge would have the most positive impact. With their support you will explore the training options (and providers) available, and agree the most suitable course of action regarding objectives, timeframes and cost. Your choices will be incorporated into a personal development plan, and we will send your chosen provider the “go ahead”. You pay them as a normal commercial arrangement but, on completion of the agreed training, a receipted invoice and a follow-up review, we will arrange for the agreed contribution to be reimbursed.

N.B. Businesses which have already been supported through the previous Leadership and Management opportunity are ineligible for further funding.
